SQUARE PEG

By DANIEL SEITZMAN

MR. HENRY NEVINS paced furiously like a caged beast up and down the whole length of the office of the Westfield "Sentinel." The short, angry puffs from his cigar were a trustworthy index to his troubled mind. The wreaths of smoke which had filled the room hung lazily, motionless, in the air, but at the first indication of his approach, they began to boil violently about his head, leaping nimbly, away as though they feared that his troubled mind was contagious. The editor of the "Sentinel" stopped abruptly in the midst of his feverish paces, hesitated, tore on again, and finally decided to sit down.

Mr. Nevins had every reason for being distressed. He had come to the small town of Westfield and established a daily newspaper a few years before. Fortunately, he had been able to secure financial support in the person of Mr. Barron, whose extensive business interests in that region had made him as powerful as a feudal lord—or rather baron, to continue the simile of his name. The paper had prospered, but not sufficiently to enable him to become a part owner. The interview he had just completed with Mr. Barron had completely marred his happiness. He frowned as his mind reviewed the circumstances attending that interview.

Mr. Barron had brought his son with him, a tall, awkward youth, who, like the sons of many notables, did not attain the mental standard of his father. In the course of the conversation, it developed that Mr. Barron had ambitions for his son, William. The latter had had some experience as editor of his high-school paper and so was competent to be an associate editor of the "Sentinel" which didn't have a very large circulation. Nevins laughed bitterly. He knew what that meant—ultimate removal when young Barron had acquired enough experience to run it himself.

"Oh, the irony of it," he thought, "to lose a newspaper, built up by my own initiative and my own sweat, to a brainless scion of a shrewd family tree."

Suddenly a thought flashed upon his seaching brain. His receptive faculties expanded to grasp every thread of hope. His face beamed with sunny radiance. The blue, hazy smoke caressed his cheeks affectionately as it slowly mounted up in delicate, shimmering threads. He would teach that sneeringly complaisant young Barron! His very ambition would be his ruin! He leaped at the telephone exultingly.

"Yes.....yes, Mr. Barron. Urgent business demands my presence in Nashville to-morrow. Your son will report for duty early to-morrow morning and take over my duties."

Mr. Barron rubbed his hands joyfully—so did Nevins.

The evening of the next day saw Henry Nevins hastening into the office of the "Sentinel." He had spent a restless day in a nearby town. With nothing to do but mark the flight of time, his imagination had tormented his time into a series of crucifixions. The next ten minutes would decide his future.

If ever dejection and defeat had stamped themselves upon the face of a man, it was palpably so in the case of Mr. Blair, his General Manager, who was sitting there as he entered. His slumped-up-position, head in hands, bespoke object misery and gloom. Upon Nevins' entrance, he looked up frightened like a timid sheep. He made a poor attempt at moistening his dried lips, swallowed, and began timorously.

"Mr. Nevins," he stuttered, "I'm afraid I have some bad news for you." He looked up to see how the remark had gone home and continued while he critically studied the ground.

"The paper has failed to get out." This simple confession made hope thunder in Nevins' ears. Blair couldn't believe the testimony of his eyes when he looked up and saw his chief smiling. Somewhat buoyed up at his good humor. Blair continued and found assurance and relief in garrulity.

"It all started with a ghastly error by Will Barron. You know, Judge Thompson's wife is dead and in Barron's eulogy of her he wrote, of the town." Of course "chastity" was a misprint for "charity", but we didn't find that out until we had a flock of woman storming the office and threatening to wreck the place if we wouldn't rectify the error.

Emotional stress and repression for the last twenty-four hours showed their violence. Nevins broke into a hoarse, diabolical shout of glee. Blair, however, incredulously passed his hands over his eyes. He continued frantically:

"We had to collect every copy we could, but Barron refused to admit defeat. He printed a question mark in parentheses after the word "chastity" and sent the papers out again. A half hour later Judge Thompson burst into the office. His manner was in contradiction to his clothes. Dressed in somber mournin, he brandished his cane about his head and broke into a torrential flood of abuse. Every sentence was emphasized with the staccato swinging of his cane. He shouted that unless every copy of the paper was collected and destroyed, the "Sentinel" would have a libel suit on its hands. But it was too late. About half of the papers had been sold already."

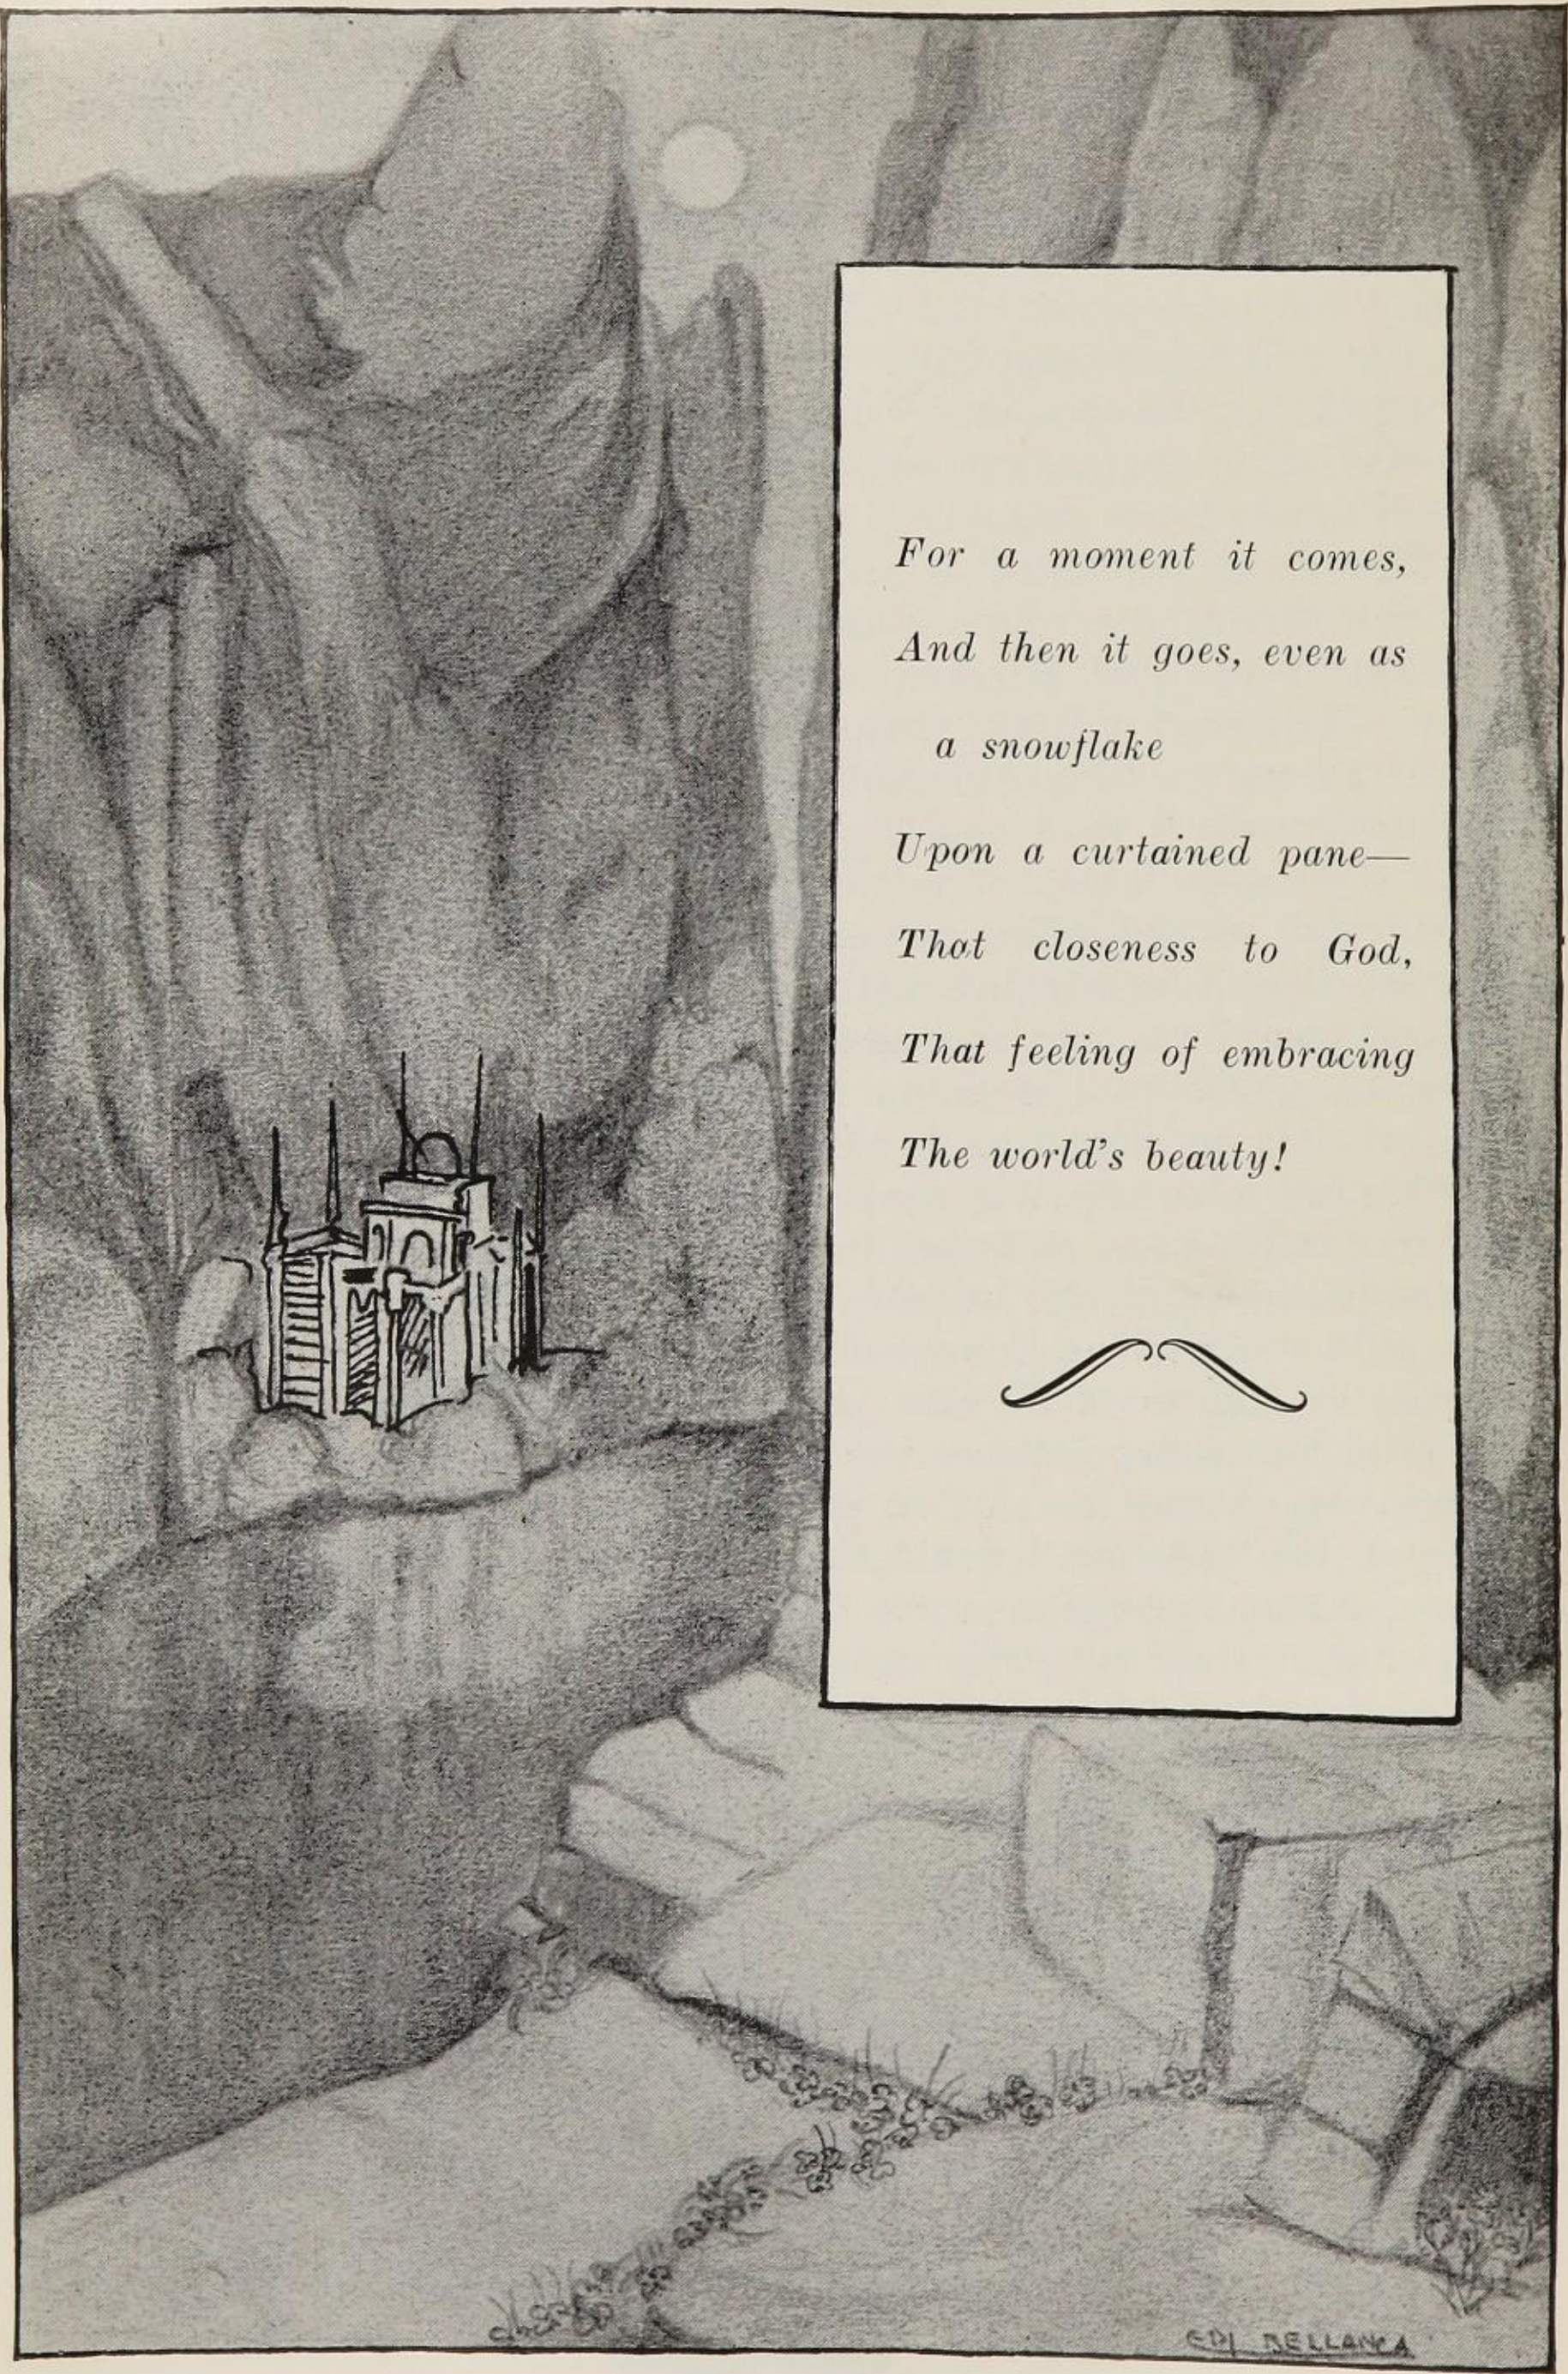

The veins stood out dangerously on Blair's red face. Beads of perspiration hung undecidely on his forehead and then coursed down to meet their brethren. Nevins had become quite calm, insanely so to Blair. The quiet that ensued made each aware of the familiar noises of the street outside. Blair was serenely and slowly inhaling each puff.

"And where is Barron?"

"By this time he should be in Kalamazoo!" The editor nodded knowingly.

"By the way, Blair, from now on you will assume the position of Associate Editor."

“GOOFY” McCool

By Arthur M. Sammeth

EVEN after he was made an ensign, the enlisted men called him “Goofy.” No, not to his face, as they used to, but whenever anyone spoke of “Goofy”, there was no doubt as to who was meant. Why, even after they forgot why, the same old name went on: “Goofy” McCool. Of course, no one knew his first name.

If you were to ask, say, “Sparks” Dorgan, or Terry Tracy about him (they were on the pig-boat when it happened), they’d probably say, “Who? ‘Goofy’?—yeah, he’s all right now, but I wisht ya could’ve seen him about four years ago. Man!—when that boy’d get excited, he’d throw anything, and everything. Supposein’ he’d be standin’ near a stanchion, and get sore, he’d lift that stanchion out’n the deck with his bare hands and heave it, he was that mad! No wonder they called him goofy, ‘nuts’! know what I mean?”

“Say, listen,” they’d say, if they saw that you were interested, “Say, listen. D’jever hear of the Snooty Rose? No—well, she was a pig-boat. What is it?—a diver, a sub, you know, a submarine, naw—that wasn’t her real name. Down in the register they called her F-14, but we called her the Snooty Rose, on account she was so sharp pointed, her nose. Naw, now we ain’t got her no more. They went and sold her to some private company.

Anyhow, me’n Goofy was on that boat together. Boy, ya’ should ha’ seen ’im then. Big husky guy (not that he ain’t big ’n husky now), with flamin’ red hair, an’ blue eyes. Not the kind of “fairy” eyes, but them light kind o’ eyes, you know, he’d look atcha, and ya’d get a shiver down yer back. An’ he had a pug nose, and a pretty wide mouth. But when he got sore, which was not very often, him bein’ good natured, his lips would tighten up until they was nuthin’ but a little cut in his face, and his blue eyes would get lighter and lighter blue an’ he’d squint until ya’d think he couldn’t see. An’ ya’ should ha’ seen his face. Man! It’d get so red that he looked like he was bleedin’! An’ heres how he got his name—ya’ know, “Goofy.”

We were on shore leave, me’n Goofy, him and I bein’ good friends then, an’ I steps up to my sister’s house, and leaves him for a minute. Well, I just get back in time to find Lieutenant Driscoll untanglin’ Goofy from two policemen who thought they could kid him about his red hair an’ git away wit it. When the two cops finally limp away, Driscoll marches us back to the ship, cuts off the rest of our shore leave, and puts us ta’ work shinin’ brass down in the engine room.

Anyhow, we was shinin’ it until Goofy starts talkin’ to himself, gettin’ mad at the way he’d been treated.

The Comet

"Lookit," he says to himself, "Lookit, here am I, an enlisted man, a double enlisted man, in fact, cleanin' up brass on a dirty pig boat, just 'cause a scurvy high-hat's in charge of this dam' ship. An' why? 'Cause I hit a cop? An' why did I hit the cop? 'Cause he said I looked like I got hit with a tomato! Ta hell with the dam' ship. I'm gonna quit this low down, half-man's navy!" An' he picks up a wrench, an' throws it full force at a couple o' wheels, smashin' 'em to bits, an' walks out.

A little while after, I hear some noise topside, an' I says to myself, "Well, I'll see him in the jug, when I'm through here."

Sure enough, I get through an' go up to the brig, an' there he is, sittin' there and cussin' out the U. S. Navy and the St. Louis Police Department.

While I'm talkin' to him thro' the bars a bog comes up an' opens the door an' lets him out, just as a bell sounds for divin' practice. So I knew why he was let out. No one is kept in the brig while we go under for practice, 'cause in case somethin' happens, then he couldn't get out, see?

Anyhow, we go down, and tap Morse signals up to some battle wagon up top. When the bell sounds to rise to the surface again. Nothin' happens.

We wait a while, thinkin' we'll go up any minute, when the lieutenant walks in and says, "Men, I've just discovered that the Releasing tank wheels have been broken. Which one of you was in Engine Room 4 today?"

"Seen' as how me an' Goofy and two others were in there, we step out of line.

"Now, then, which one of you men is responsible for this?" and he holds up a wrench. "I found this lying under the wheel!"

"Uh, I am," murmurs Goofy nervously. "I got sore and threw it. But I didn't see what it hit."

"Oh, you Got Sore?" says the lieutenant. "Well, my man, just because you got sore, and threw it, may cost us our lives. Yuh've broken the wheel on the releasin' tanks, and until we get either another handle or are lifted up by derricks, we stay right on the bottom of the sea. Any man who would pull a trick like that deserves to be shot, drawn and quartered; and at any rate, you'll get this!

And in front of the whole crew, he steps forward and slaps Goofy clean on the cheek, and barks: "You're yella—yella enough to throw something when you get sore—yella!"

Well, ya' shoulda' seen Goofy. The whole hand of the lieutenant was stamped in his face, in white, and the rest was burnin' on fire.

We all walk away, nervously, and some o' the men ask questions about raisin' the ship, but the lieutenant says that there is very little hope, and the best we can do is accept our fate like men.

Me'n Goofy walk downstairs, him holdin' the wrench, the lieutenant havin' given it to him, and he starts talkin' mad-like all of a sudden.

"Yella am I? Drawn and quartered, huh? Slaps me in the face, does he, the bilge rat? I'll show him," an' he swings the wrench over his head and with a mighty crash brings it down in exactly the same spot where he hit before.

The Comet

Well, there's a big explosion, and we both get knocked out cool.

When I open my eyes, all I can see is the blue sky, an' rememberin' where I was last, I think I'm dead, until Driscoll pokes his face into mine.

Well, I get up off the deck where I'm layin' and find out that I'm on the old Snooty Rose—but on top of the ocean instead of under it!

"How'd it happen?" I asks the looney.

"Well," he says, "if it wasn't for the way your friend McCool has of throwin' wrenches we'd be down there yet. When he hit that wheel before, he fixed it so we couldn't empty the tanks. But when he slammed it the second time, he snapped the handle off, and blew every drop of water out of those same damned tanks!"

"'Goofy'"—they call him "'Lucky' " that's what I'd say.

The Eternal Play

Jaques.

All the world's a stage,

And all the men and women merely players:

They have their exits and their entrances.....

AS YOU LIKE IT (Act II Sc. VII)

A vast setting! A great cast!

The act keeps going; no one's the last.

A player drops out; another appears.

This play does not end, after so many years.

The setting is never discarded for new;

Though the changes, time makes, are not very few.

How many spectators watch this great show?

There is only one of whom I know.

The Audience, Producer, and Critic is One.

He's managed the players since Time has begun.

To enter or leave, one waits for his cues.

One can not decide to accord or refuse.

Both comedies and tragedies together appear

On this wonderful stage, year after year.

The Future Inferno

By JACOB PERETZ

I AM not mad I tell you. Don't stare at me that way. It's no mere disease of the brain. I have seen it—that awful eruption—the fires of death—the shrieking furies. That spectacle is no delusion—I could see—feel it—it haunts me—does not leave me. You see I'm not an idiot—not crazy—it was the promise of the future—the Future Inferno.

It was quite warm, and a holiday besides, and naturally the parks and streets were crowded. Having shed my topcoat, I strolled along and finally sat down on an unoccupied bench in a little park. The soft, green foliage overhead hid the burning sun. The little children, rosy-cheeked and happy, gamboled and frolicked on the grass at my feet. I felt gloomy, morose and out of sorts. The bright sunshine, the happy children, the happy world—all this jarred on my nerves. I picked up a newspaper. I noticed an article written by an eminent scientist concerning the Solar System's rapid approach to the nebulae—the End had come. Thump, thump, thump—and lifeless bodies dropped to the ground. The hordes were all traveling—none standing still. But there was no escape—all were doomed—rich man, poor man, beggar, emperor. Fire, Hell's fires had broken out—all the world was burning—a huge funeral pyre.

And then the wind. The fear lessened, became less oppressive—but the wind, was no mere wind—it was a wall—no it was not a wall—it was a universe tumbling into eternity. My heart was bursting—the influx of air was too great for it. I tried to shout, to scream—The Calamity had happened—all was lost in the turmoil—the death struggle of a gigantic world with a natural force. I was being torn apart, asunder. I was going—going—going.

With a shriek I awoke. I'm not mad, it was true. It was no idle fancy, I lived, it was true, too true, the inevitable truth—The Future Inferno.

I TALK TO YOU

All day long, and sometimes far into the night,
I talk to people—endless streams of them;
We talk of this and that . . . and sometimes of that and this . . .
And yet—I tell them nothing of myself.
Then for a brief space of time,
A snatched moment fraught with sullen fear,
I talk to you . . .
But—I say so much,
So much of what is me—
That oft I fear, someday,
There will be nothing left to say. . . .

“Ils ne passeront pas,” translated to “They shall not pass”.

There is now a controversy as to who said this—General Joffre—or the New Utrecht faculty.

Police Commissioner Whalen Invades New Utrecht! A police booth has been planted at the far side of our field. Step a little faster, you Service Squadders!

“All right, we’ll play with a half deck then!”

This is just another session of our Bridge Club, which holds meetings every Thursday in the Girl’s Lunchroom after the 7th and 8th. The officers are:—David Cohn, President; Sylvia Sennet, Vice-President; and Herbert Glasser, Secretary.

If it isn’t one, it’s the other. Madison beat us at football and then basketball, but our “Tongue Team” beat them in a thrilling debate! What’s the matter? We ask you!

He holds the gun in his hand, a look of sincere determination crossing his flushed countenance. His body is rigid and tense. He contemplates for a moment—then quickly he raises the pistol—slowly, steadily he draws the trigger. His body relaxes. Barney Hyman resumes his seat. The 100 yard dash had begun!

There is the crunch of hard, tough bodies colliding. . . . Edgar plunges through—surges forward. . . . Yes, we were at the Senior Prom, and have come to the conclusion that Edgar is an excellent football player.

The Latin Pony is fast fading. A translation of the poems of Robert Browning is much more fashionable—not to say useful! Ask for a Brownie.

A history student’s dreams come true! In one of the review sheets issued by Mr. L-v-ne lately, one of the mimeographed questions read as follows: “cuss the Federal Reserve System.” We wonder if the students gave vent to their feelings.

The Comet

And this one is an honest to goodness fact—6th Period—404.

Mr. S—d—t! Why, boy, that answer is irrelevant, unauthentic, misleading and fallacious.

Meek, timid voice in rear:—And I thought it was wrong.

Do you get that tired feeling when a teacher gives you a zip or a Service Squadder slaps you on the back? Overcome this feeling! Drink OXO! It will revive you.

Conforming to the custom originated last term of choosing a “Lady Comet” we propose none other than the cheerful and charming “Mimi” Strelser.

The little boy who used to read “Nick Carter”, behind his geography, grew up and now reads his tabloid behind a good paper.

The Italian Club has had a very commendable term and is holding a party as this goes into print. The officers are: Garry Vetrano, President; Anthony Scuderi, Vice-President; Felix Fusio, Secretary; and Miss Romeo, Treasurer.

Bang! Bang! Bang! Yep! You’ve guessed it. Mr. Moses and his sharpshooters aiming at the high spots.

The Senior Glee Club has been organized for its fourth year. Mr. Wilhousky, who has directed the club since the beginning, is at work on the Negro spiritual song, “Deep River,” and the Russian chorus, “Dusk of Night.” The officers are Sol Plaks, president; Betty Carlinsky, vice-president; Nat Weinstein, secretary, and Joe Witkin, manager.

We pounced upon a freshie down under the boys’ locker-room. Yes, Hortense, he was actually looking for Davy Jones’ locker.

For the annexes—we wish to say that it would be practically impossible for us to come down very often to get school notes. Therefore, if you should get some yourselves, just bring it down to the Main Building and hand it to the School Notes Editor in the Comet Office. Those submitting the most and the best material will be made Annex Reporters for School Notes.

1930 Headline—“Utrecht Wins Big Air Derby”

Yes, dear readers, this will be a reality in the near future if our Aviation Club can help it. This new club meets every week under the able guidance of Miss Simon.

Mr. Simon's definition of a Senior:

“A Senior is a boy who has reached the age when he thinks the most important thing to pass is not his examination, but the car ahead!”

Many questions have been put to us, concerning the identity of that cute little girl whose picture adorned our humble colyum last issue. Guess again, dear readers—the simplest things escape detection.

“Study for all you're worth,” said the teacher, warningly to us recently. Perhaps he was cleverly hinting that we need not study any more.

We have a suggestion for modest “Whitey” Edgar. He should wear eye-glasses—It would make him a spectacular player.

FOOTBALL

UTRECHTITES of the present generation will always remember the disappointing football season of 1928. New Utrecht has always prided itself upon its fine elevens, and, although the truth may hurt it is but just to say that the team of 1928 has compiled the worst record of any New Utrecht eleven since the featherweight team of 1916. Not since 1920 has New Utrecht bowed to Brooklyn Prep on the gridiron; not until the past season has St. John's prevailed over the Green and White.

Primarily it was the lack of any sort of adequate replacement material that was the main feature of the many defeats. At the beginning of the season Coach Zysman was faced with the stupendous task of building the team from the ground up. The light line that made its debut in the Jefferson game was but a shadow of the steamroller type of forward wall that it has been the New Utrecht tradition to maintain. Captain Hy Dvorkin at guard, Bethill at tackle, and Kirstein at center played inspired football but the rest of the line, although fast and willing lacked beef and that indefinable spark that is acquired only after weeks of hardening in the crucible of Interscholastic football competition. The backfield, playing behind a weak line never had an even chance to display its offensive powers. Edgar, Rice and Ceravolo, of whom nothing more than good ground gaining abilities were expected at the beginning of the season, rose to the occasion more than once to show inspired defensive play.

Next year the football fortunes of the Green and White should take a considerable rise, for Coach Zysman will have good veteran material. The unfortunate break in athletic relations with Poly Prep is to be deplored and the substitution on our schedule of Erasmus Hall, an old rival, and Brooklyn Tech compensate us for the chance of a victory over the Dyker Heights institution, but we must learn to "take our losses with a smile and a song, and our gains with a wink and whistle" and to set our eyes on the future with the determination that next time victory shall be ours.

HOCKEY

TO THE average individual it may seem to be a rather silly paradox to state that the high brand of hockey that Mr. T. J. Fitzpatrick teaches his pupils, was the cause of their downfall in the P. S. A. L. tournament this winter, and yet it is quite true. In the very first game of the season the team went out on the ice decided favorites against a weak Boy's High sextet. Before the game was very old both teams had scored goals, and then the Boy's team, intent on holding the Green and White in check started an entirely new system of play. The entire team play of the Utrecht team came to naught. If the Utrecht team had only descended to the same level of shinny as Boys, their superior weight would have eked out a victory and New Utrecht would not have missed breaking into the play-offs for the champion, at least not by the margin of a Boys High tie.

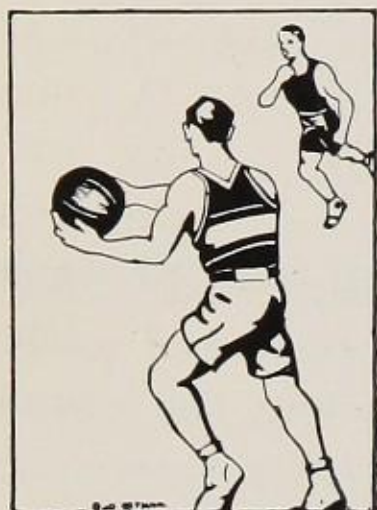

The next four games on the schedule were easily won by the Green and White. In the next game New Utrecht pulled a tartar in Erasmus, and the best it could do, was to earn another tie. In the final game Jamaica, our old hockey rivals, definitely smashed titular aspirations for us by administering a sound 2 to 0 defeat.

The first team of Kuntz and Captain Ted McArdle, wings; Lührssen, center; Richardson and Vinje, defense; and Calvosa, goal; proved to be fast, capable players and with another chance to playoff all their tie contests, an innovation that is expected to be passed by the P. S. A. L. committee for next season, they would have achieved better results. Connors, Lippman, Ryan, Goldstein, Seiker, and Cohen were good spares who are expected to develop into fine, polished players by next season. As for next year's team, Coach Fitzpatrick expects to mold a better combination than this year's contingent even though Captain McArdle, Calvosa, and Lippman will be graduated. With that end in view Manager Bobeck has booked post season contests with New Rochelle High School, Hun School, and games which are pending, with Morristown, Montclair, and La Salle Military Academy. All in all 1929 should prove to be a better year for new Utrecht hockey aspirations than 1928.

Basketball

IN 1927 NEW UTRECHT basketball team reached a new level. With the annexation of the Brooklyn crown for the first time in its history the team went on to defeat Textile for the Manhattan championship in a thrilling game. The playoff with Newtown for the city leadership showed only one thing—the evident superiority of the Queen’s school.

At the start of the past season the 1928 team started out in much the same manner as its predecessor. Far Rockaway, Newtown, Textile, and Lane were mopped up in rapid succession, and then came that unfortunate contest with Hamilton. Hamilton presented a veteran combination,—the same team that started against us in 1927. Individually the New Utrecht team seemed to be as good, if not better than the champions of ’27, but a striking contrast was soon apparent. Whereas last year’s team rose to the occasion against Newtown only to be beaten by a rival that simply played better basketball, Coach Ross’ charges cracked wide open at the crucial moment. Perhaps the team needed more seasoning; but that can hardly be the cause since Captain Potter and S. Olshansky were veterans of the championship team while Abromowitz, J. Putterman, Itkin, L. Olshansky, and Brown all saw service as reserves.

THhe team came back after the Hamilton defeat to score wins over Boys and Bushwick, but the old jinx cropped up once more when we were defeated by Madison by a mere two points. Then a close victory over a weak Manual team and subsequent wins over Eastern District and Erasmus Hall relieved the tension somewhat, but a crushing defeat by Jefferson destroyed all hopes for the Brooklyn championship. Naturally the morale of the squad dropped considerably and in the second game of a home and home agreement Newtown avenged its earlier defeat. The team, however, closed the season as it opened it,—with a victory, this time over Brooklyn Tech.

The members of the squad deserve a good deal of credit. For the first half of the season the team was composed of Abromowitz and Putterman at forwards, Itkin at center, and S. Olshansky and Captain Sam Potter at guards. The second half of the season saw Coach Ross send a different combination onto the court. The Olshansky brothers played forwards, Itkin started at center, Potter played left guard, and Siskind and Parsons alternated at right guard. Brown, Auerbach, Katz, Bonavita, Rosenthal, Reisen, and Manager Eckhaus proved to be decided assets to the team.

Track

IF 1928 HAS proved to be a hard year for New Utrecht athletic teams at least the track team is the exception that proves the rule. New Utrecht has won the indoor track championship four times in the past five years and with the help of Coach Barney Hyman is due to make it five. To date the Green and White has easily captured the few track meets that it has entered, rather easily. The Eastern District Relays, the season opener, was copped with a mere 18 points. On the following Saturday the team journeyed uptown to annex the Stuyvesant Games trophy with 37 points. The Diocesan Schools meet in which the team collected 24 points made it three in a row. For the rest of the winter the schedule calls for the De La Salle meet, P. S. A. L. champs, Newark National champs, St. John's meet, Elks meet, Y. M. C. A. meet, Manual meet, Syracuse meet, and Harvard meet. In addition the one-mile relay will enter several special events at big meets. Although the schedule is very hard there is no reason why New Utrecht should go through the season undefeated.

The personnel of the team is as versatile as ever. Although captain Singer has been sick and has therefore missed the Stuyvesant and Diocesan meets Andursky, Katz, Sternback, Krosney, Ashkenazie, Mann, Furth, several promising novices have carried on in his stead. Teitelbaum and Nottonson in the quarter-mile have been doing well, while Kaminsky, Hanke, Emil Friedman and several members of the cross-country team are earning points in Rosner's old specialty, the half-mile. The relays are well taken care of and out of all the track events the mile run remains the only one in which we are weak. This year's team is a definite improvement over that of last year in the Shot-put. Wurtenburg, Simnowitz, and Bonavita, promise to develop into another one-two-three-combination that will rival the good old Labes, Adelman, Smith trio. Fred Wurtenburg in particular has all earmarks of a future Dave Adelman. While breaking his novice in the Stuyvesant Meet the stocky shot-putter also broke a six year old record set by Frank Labes. It won't be long now before Wurtenburg will break fifty feet. At any rate, sizing up the situation the championship is a sure thing.

Soccer

EVER since Mr. Yudell has taken charge of soccer the sport has flourished at New Utrecht. The team turned in a fairly good record for the past year, finishing second in its division and for a time threatening the leader. The high lights of the past season were the victories over Erasmus and Boys High, and, in a way, the tie game with Madison. Chepacoff, an all-scholastic selection, Singer, and Driscoll played well on the defense while Sperling, Schneider, and Withkowsky starred on the offense. Captain Emil Cerota was all over the field and proved to be an inspiring leader. Oscar Blumberg proved to be a good manager.

TO ALICE BACK FROM WONDERLAND

I too have slain the flame-eyed Jabberwack;
 I too have leaned against the Tumtum tree;
 I too have heard the sad mock-turtle mock,
 And laughed at Tweedledum and Tweedledee.
 I too have laughed and inwardly have wept
 To see the sun's last rays in the White Knight's eyes;
 And dreaming dreams within a dream have slept
 On checkered fields beneath fantastic skies,
 Oh, Alice, has ever a sunless day made known
 To you the White Knight as a stray sun beam?
 The jub-jub Bird, the frumions Bandersnatch,
 The Jabberwocky, all, a shapeless dream?

Thelma Levine.

Swimming

IT IS surprising that a school like New Utrecht with its fine swimming pool and its modern equipment should progress so slowly in the yearly interscholastic swimming tournament. Last year Mr. MacDavitt developed a fine team that lead the league for a number of weeks only to lose it in the final in the last few weeks to Manual and Erasmus.

This year the team started out like a whirlwind, in much the same manner as last year's combination. The team, led by Captain Arnold Finfer, easily defeated Jamaica and Lane in rapid succession, to assume the leadership. Flushing, however turned the tables on the Green and White in the next meet. Madison, one of the weakest teams in the league provided a sensation by holding Utrecht to a tie, thus relegating the team to a position among the tail-enders. Since Brooklyn Tech and Erasmus completed the season of the Green and White by administering defeats there is little likelihood of rising above sixth place, this winter. However Manual, Jefferson, and Boy's are still to be met. A victory over Boys is assured while victories over the other two schools is not at all unlikely. If the team does not end up well this season, we must remember that next winter is another year and that Mr. MacDavitt in time, may convince the swimmers that they are not all wet.

CONSOLATION

Two grey sullen clouds
 Passed over the moon tonight—
 And hid its splendor for a moment.
 All was dark—for there were no stars—
 But for that moment I missed not
 The splendor of the silver moon.
 I welcomed the darkness
 For that moment.

SENIOR OFFICERS

E. LANGB

WE, the members of the Class of January 1929, having been pronounced of sound mind by the faculty, and without any persuasion, force or compromise, do hereby leave, bequeath, bestow and donate the following items to the following persons:

To Miss Grant we leave some "salve" of which she may a-vale herself.

To Miss Finkelstein we leave a "Glossary of Polite Cuss-words," to replace those which have been worn out on this class in general, on Larry Beckerman in particular.

To Mr. Mahey, we leave $43.79 in order to place it in bets on questions in economics.

To Dr. Leuchs, we leave a new rubber stamp with which to sign admits.

To the Seventh Formers, we leave the hope that they will pass Eco. and kill Macbeth without too much bloodshed.

To the next Editor of the COMET we leave the hope that all the material will be in on time.

To the school we leave the building, the Faculty (sorry, but someone had to get them), and everything not portable.

To Dr. Potter, we leave our heartiest good wishes and wish to express our sorrow at leaving him.

We make Mr. W. C. Leonard the executor of this will and if all the provisions herein are not faithfully carried out, may all his students be funny humorists.

Signed, in the presence of the Janitor (who wants to throw us out of the Comet Office), on this, the day on which we are parting from our beloved Alma Mater in whose halls we have spent the happiest days of our life. By these, we affix our signature and seal.

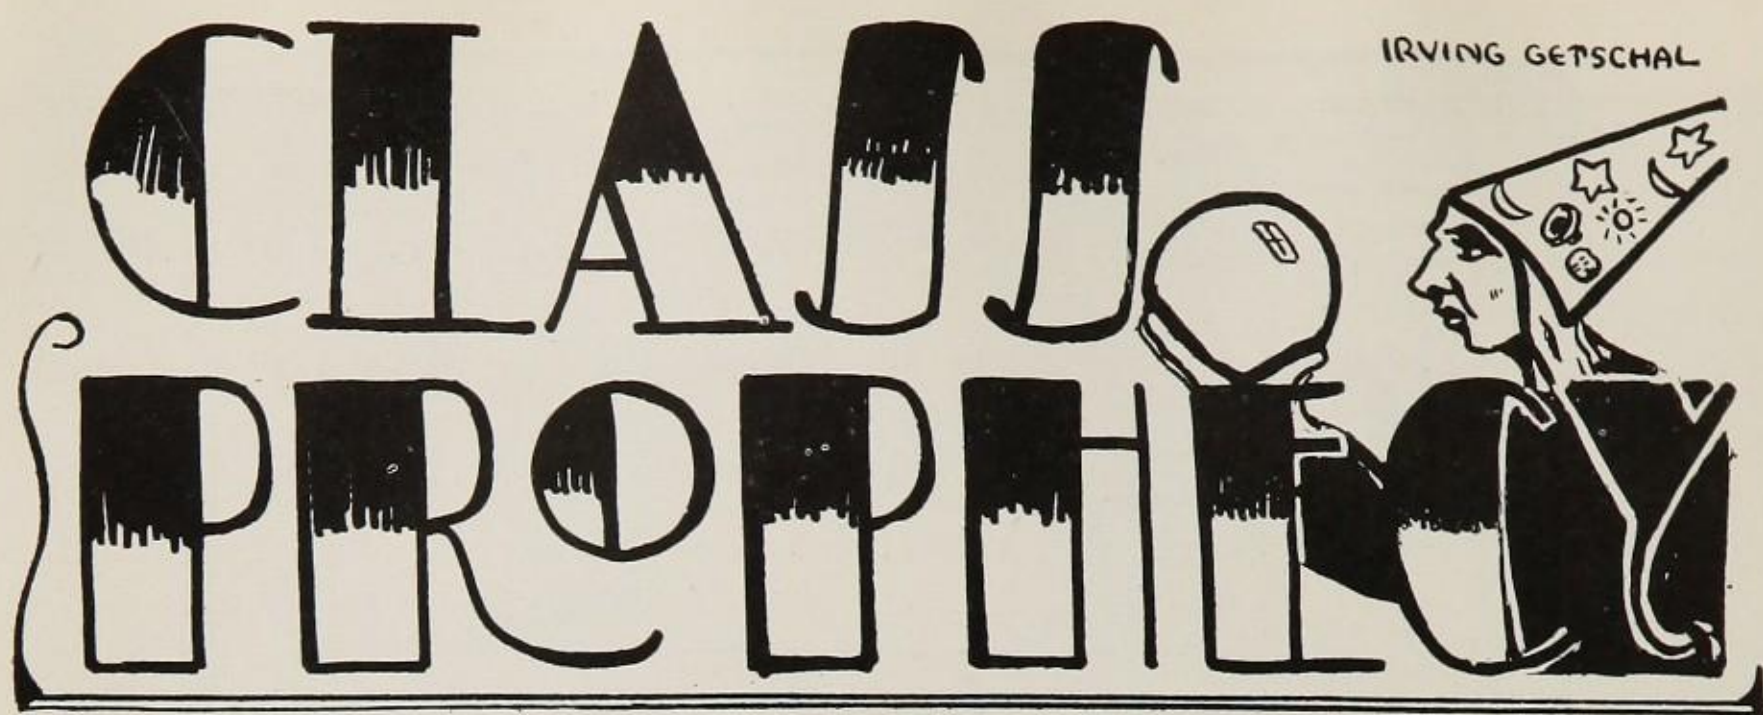

The Class of January 1929,

Witnesses:

By Larry Beckerman

WE were walking along the boardwalk at Coney Island and since we had just come back from France, we decided to take in all the sights. The first sign that caught our eyes was that of Pseudo, the "Great Oriental Fakir" and incidentally, faker. Since we had nothing much to do, we went in.

It was a dimly-lighted, cozy place that we entered. We saw a gleaming crystal and surrounding it a pile of soft cushions. We sat down on one and waited.

Pseudo entered. He was dressed in yards of silk. He wore a purple and yellow mask, which covered his face entirely.

"What would you like to know?" he asked.

"Oh," we said, "tell us what happened to our fellow-convicts back at New Utrecht High School."

When we mentioned the school, the man started, but recovered his Oriental poise in a moment.

"Well," said he, peering into the crystal, "listen—"

(This is a substance of what he told us.)

Ira Singer has won the 5th annual "Bunion Derby."

Hy Dvorkin has joined Grange's Yankees.

"Smiling" Anna Levin has become a telephone operator. The voice with a smile.

Bess Freeman has been sent to the Olympic games as entry in the mile run. Back in Utrecht she was always running for something.

Pete Tropea is an insurance collector. He always could extract money.

"Rose" Gold will enter her father's business of florist, after she finishes her term of imprisonment for tampering with the "males."

Sol Asch, too, is a florist. He specializes in "lilies."

Lil Pundick did not visit the Comet Office on her visit to school and is now repenting in sack cloth and "ashes."

Leon Reingold has bought, edited and ruined the "Daily News."

Ethel Lieberman, always ready to help, is secretary to the Mayor.

Miriam Evens plays the part of the heroine in "Robin Hood."

The Comet

Percy Livingstone has joined the army.

Lil Engel is the foremost authority on basketball. This is a result of seeing so many games.

Larry Beckerman, after a study of Helen-ic art has become a French teacher.

After he finished these statements, the soothsayer turned to me and took off his mask. It was Sid Goldstein. He always did like to fool the public.

A GHOST RETURNS

AT LAST I had been given a furlough. I was free to do as I pleased until two o'clock that day. If I were not back at two, my grave would close up and I would be a wandering ghost. I decided to retrace my steps to dear old New Utrecht and see how things were going along there.

Within two minutes I was entering the building. I thought I would go to see Dr. Potter first. I made up way to the General Office. On approaching the principal's desk—lo and behold!—whom did I see sitting there?—None other than our very own W. C. Leonard. His hair was in white locks reaching almost to his shoulders. Before him lay open the "Three Musketeers," which he read while munching on a chocolate box. I hesitated upon disturbing him because I knew when he read this book it was a sign of his being in a bad humor. Nevertheless, I braved the danger and spoke his name. After a pleasant conversation. I left him and took the elevator up to the fourth floor. When I stepped out of the lift, I barely missed colliding with a someone bobbling along on crutches. On looking at the person a second time I saw that it was Hy Dvorkin.

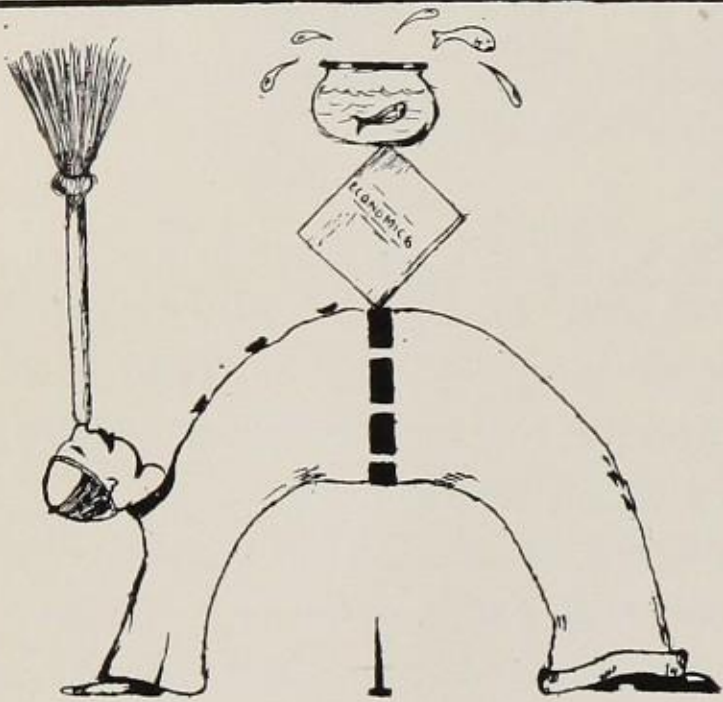

"Hello, Hy," I cried, "what have you been doing to yourself?"

"Just another football scrimmage," he replied.

After we had exchanged a few more words, I proceeded along the hall. Down at the end I saw a group of students. Upon drawing nearer I saw Henny Besdine, in the center of the group, talking for the Nuhs. I decided not to disturb him and was about to turn the corner when I heard Mr. Hirsch hammering geometry into the pupils' heads. I was going to enter 426 when I suddenly perceived the clock and saw that it was three minutes to two. I did not want to leave the building without saying "Hello" to Mr. Hirsch, so I decided to spend two minutes speaking to him and one minute in getting back to my grave. I entered the room and my former math teacher, slightly bald and very gray at the temples. He was still wearing the inevitable alpaca coat. He was very glad to see me and we fell to talking. Unknowingly I remained there ten minutes. I suddenly realized the fact and became almost panic-stricken; for to be a ghost without a grave is an awkward situation. Then an idea came to me! I hurriedly made my farewell to Mr. Hirsch and ran down to the third floor. A few minutes later—very much relieved—I was rapidly decending the main staircase with a late pass from Mrs. Avirett in my hand.

THE CRAVEN

(With Apologies to Poe's "The Raven")

Once upon a term beginning,
After many terms of sinning,
A disgusted, heartsick student
Stamped his feet upon the floor.
And he said, "It's just been sifting
Through my dome that I've been drifting,
And my ways I must be shifting
As I've never done before;
So this term I mean to study,
Study hard—and nothing more."
In an eloquent recital
He set forth the very vital
Need of change of attitude
To save him from "the door".
"Bygones," said he, "I'm forgetting—
Even though it means regretting—
Now my molars I am setting,
And this term I'll sit and pore
Over volumes ten and more.
Of the toughest kind of lore."
This he howled, and also more.
Two weeks passed, in which our hero,
Once a patron of the zero,
Had redressed a goodly number
Of the wrongs of days of yore.
Then came one Bohunkus Dubb—
Asking him to join a club—
And he joined it—there's a rub;
For he studied—nevermore!

THE CARTOONIST TURNS TO RADIO

Said the famous doctor, "Go, and get yourself—a radio,
And relax if you would dodge complete prostration,"
So the comic-strip cartoonist got a forty-tube, the soonest
That he could, to soothe his nervous agitation.

And that night in dressing gown, the cartoonist sat him down,
To obtain the recreation that he needed;
Something novel which would refresh him, not the old things which depressed him,
For the Doc. was doubtless right, he conceded.

Then for many fevered weeks, turning knobs and fighting squeeks,
The cartoonist tried to turn in station P O W I E!
And his reason got the gate, through his failure to locate
Stations POOF! and CLANK! and WOOF! and BHAM! and ZOWIE!

This cartoonist, sad to say, has by friends been put away;
In the booby hatch you'll find him plainly flooey.
First he moans and then he sobs, as he twists and turns door knobs
In a frantic search to locate station B L O O I E !
